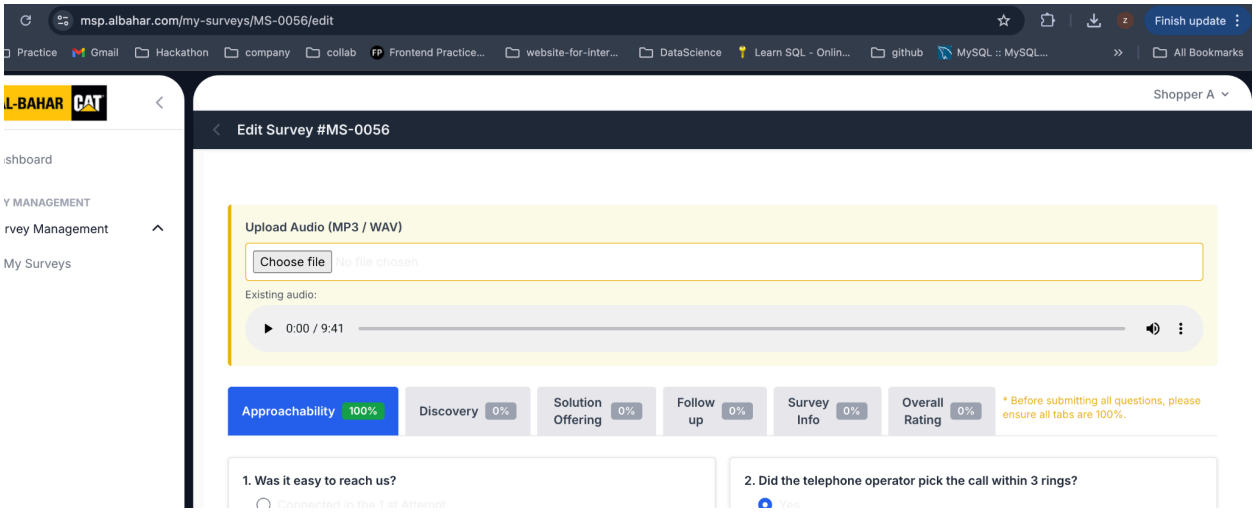
Audio Related Issue

After uploading the audio file, I am unable to play it immediately. I have to save the survey as a draft and reopen it in order to play the audio file.

Additionally, if an incorrect audio file is uploaded by mistake, there is currently no option available to delete or replace the audio. As a result, the survey cannot be corrected and becomes unusable.



The audio is accessible only after you save it as a draft

Text / Form Drop-Down Menu Related Issue

- The website does not display the assigned survey type (Call / Walk-in), which makes it difficult for the shopper to identify and select the correct survey when multiple surveys are available.
- Due to this issue, I accidentally selected the wrong survey and attached the audio file. Later, I realized that it was not the correct survey. Since there is no option to delete or replace the attached audio file, the survey cannot be corrected and becomes unusable. Additionally, there is no option within the survey to play or review the uploaded audio file.

Images Option in Survey

In my opinion, there is no need to include an image upload option for every question in the survey. This approach can result in a large number of null or empty values throughout the survey responses.

When multiple surveys are conducted (for example, 50 surveys in a month with around 20 questions each), having an image field for every question significantly increases the number of empty fields in the dataset. This can make the data structure unnecessarily large and more difficult to manage.

Additionally, it becomes challenging to generate clear and accurate reports during monthly audits. The presence of numerous empty or null image fields complicates report calculations and data analysis.

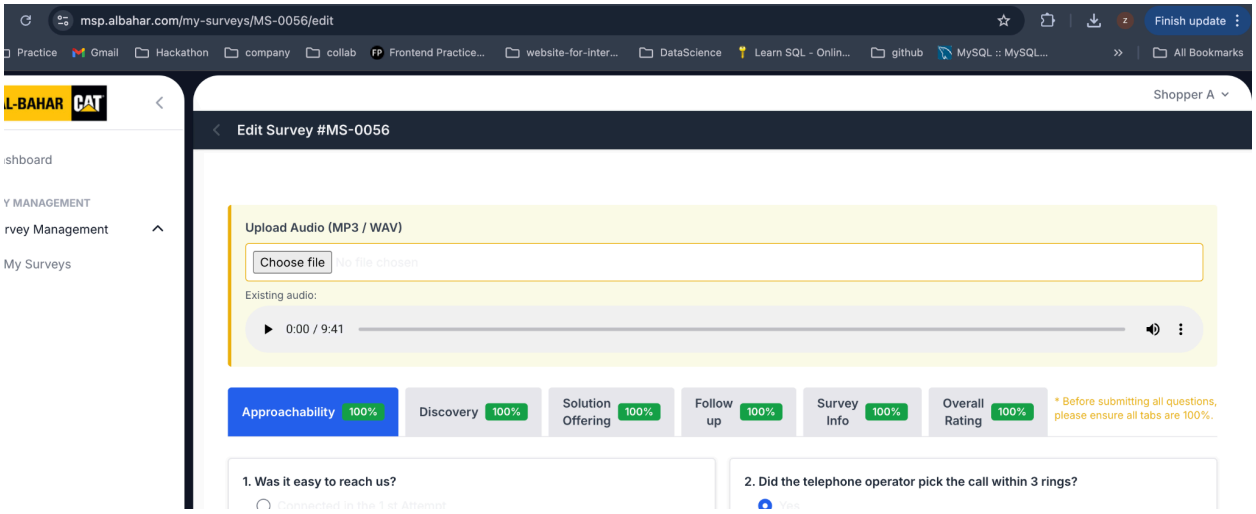
It would be more efficient to include the image upload option in a specific section or a limited number of relevant questions instead of placing it throughout the entire survey.

Survey Submission and Draft Issue

The survey can be submitted after completing all the questionnaire sections. However, once the survey is submitted, there is no option to edit it for quality checks or to correct any issues that may be identified later.

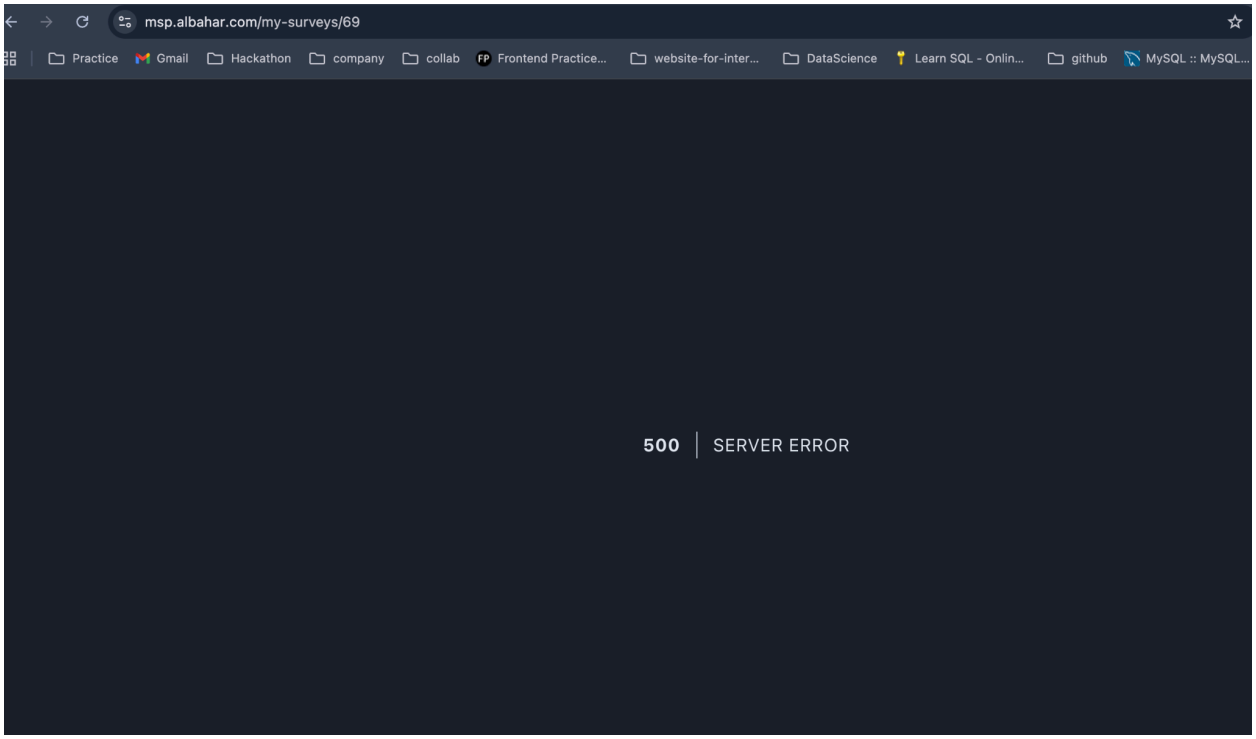
If editing is required, the survey must first be saved as a draft. However, the draft functionality does not appear to be working properly. After saving the survey as a draft and then pressing the submit button, the survey does not get submitted immediately. It seems to take additional time or may require approval from the Quality Check (QC) team, although the exact reason is unclear.

Because of this behavior, the Save Draft option is not functioning reliably for submitting the survey after making edits.



Everything is 100% but I am unable to submit it.

If you save the survey as a draft you're not able to submit that survey, you have to fill the survey in one go and press the submit button.



Text Visibility and Media Upload Limitations

The text color used in dropdown menus and several option fields appears in a very light grey or white shade, which makes it extremely difficult to read. Shoppers have to look very carefully to understand what has been selected or entered.

This visibility issue occurs in multiple areas, including:

- The dropdown menu while assigning a survey
- The survey details displayed at the QC level after a survey is assigned
- MCQ options and comment fields while filling out the survey

The low-contrast text color affects usability and makes the interface difficult to work with.

Additionally, there is currently no option to upload multiple audio files or multiple images within the survey, which limits the ability to provide complete supporting evidence when required.
